New Surroundings

Change initiates transition like lightening initiates thunder. It has an energy all its own and stirs everything up. The past, the present and the unknown future are all in the mix. When the past becomes a distant dream and the future is yet to come, the present parks itself in neutral and waits. Eventually the inertia gives way to movement and a portal to the next chapter in our lives begins to appear.

These three stages of transition; the past, the present and the future; are the fuel for this small body of work.
